The Origins of the House of Guerra

The House of Guerra is one of the oldest and most illustrious noble families in all of Europe. Its origins can be traced back to the 11th century, when a young knight named Rodrigo Guerra was granted the lordship of a vast estate in the mountains of northern Spain. Rodrigo's descendants would go on to play a major role in the Reconquista, the centuries-long struggle to drive the Moors out of Spain. By the end of the 15th century, the House of Guerra had become one of the most powerful and influential families in the kingdom of Castile.

In the 16th century, the Spanish Empire began to expand its reach across the Atlantic Ocean. Among the many conquistadors who sailed to the New World was a young man named Hernán Cortés. Cortés was a distant relative of the House of Guerra, and he carried with him a letter of recommendation from his cousin, the Duke of Medina Sidonia. Cortés's expedition landed in Mexico in 1519, and within two years he had conquered the mighty Aztec Empire. Cortés's victory made him one of the most famous and successful conquistadors in history, and he was rewarded with a vast estate in Mexico.
