The Enduring Alliance is made up of the following organizations:

- The United Nations
- The World Bank
- The International Monetary Fund
- The World Trade Organization
- The North Atlantic Treaty Organization
- The European Union

- The Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe
- The African Union
- The Arab League
- The Association of Southeast Asian Nations

These organizations work together to address a wide range of global challenges, including:

- Conflict prevention and resolution
- Economic development
- Human rights
- Climate change
- Terrorism

The Enduring Alliance has played a vital role in promoting peace and security in the world. The United Nations has deployed peacekeeping missions to over 70 countries, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has helped to deter aggression in Europe. The World Bank and the International Monetary Fund have provided financial assistance to developing countries, and the World Trade Organization has promoted free trade.

The Enduring Alliance has also made significant progress in promoting human rights. The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the United Nations in 1948, sets out a comprehensive list of fundamental human rights and freedoms. The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, both adopted by the United Nations in 1976, provide binding obligations for states to respect and protect these rights.

The Enduring Alliance faces a number of challenges in the 21st century. These challenges include:

- The rise of new global powers
- The increasing interconnectedness of the world
- The spread of terrorism
- Climate change

Despite these challenges, the Enduring Alliance remains a vital force for peace and security in the world. The alliance is well-positioned to address the challenges of the 21st century and to continue to promote peace, prosperity, and human rights for all.
